Samsung profit halves asAuthToken:

Profits at the Korean electronics giant were hit by a global industry downturn in memory prices. The company reported its first quarterly loss in mobile sales, as smartphone sales continued to slide and its smartphone division was hit by a $700 million hit from the Note 7 recall. Samsung's earnings were also hit by a one-time charge of $1.5 billion related to the recall of the Galaxy Note 7 smartphones.

In the second quarter, Samsung's operating profit was $1.7 billion, compared with $7.0 billion a year earlier. The company's mobile division, which makes the Galaxy smartphones, reported an operating loss of $1.3 billion, compared with a profit of $3.5 billion in the second quarter of 2016. Sales in the mobile division fell 18% to $13.9 billion.

Samsung, which is also known for its TVs, home appliances and semiconductors, said it expected the smartphone division to continue to struggle through the year, as the global smartphone market continues to weaken.

The company also reported a drop in sales of its flash memory chips, which are used in smartphones and other devices. Sales in the memory chip division fell 26% to $11.2 billion.

For the fiscal year ending March 2017, Samsung forecast profit was $27.3 billion, down from $34.7 billion a year earlier.

Samsung's results came as other smartphone makers also reported weak sales. Apple Inc. reported a 10% decline in sales in its iPhone business, and Huawei Technologies Co. reported a 12% drop in smartphone shipments in the first quarter.
